Panel: For the Love of the World

Friday, March 10, 2017

10:30 am - 12 pm

Cross Common Room, 108 St. John's College

Diane Enns: "In Spite of the World"

Dr. Diane Enns is an Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy, McMaster University. Her most recent book, co-edited with Antonio Calcagno, is titled Thinking About Love, and explores how one might think about love philosophically—with recourse to the writings of Hannah Arendt, Simone de Beauvoir, Jacques Derrida, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, and others.

Antonio Calcagno: "On the Possibility of World"

Dr. Antonio Calcagno is a Full Professor of Philosophy at King's College, University of Western Ontario, and Co-Director of the Centre for Advanced Research in European Philosophy. Dr. Calcagno's work follows Hannah Arendt in attempting to develop a philosophical concept of interiority that tries to analyze what it is for us to have and experience, meaningfully, an interior world.

Alphonso Lingis: "A Hard and Brutal Mysticism"

Dr. Alphonso Lingis is a Professor Emeritus in the Department of Philosophy, Pennsylvania State University. He has travelled to many of the world's most impoverished and overlooked places as part of his ongoing attempt to articulate a theory of community not rooted in some privileged ideal of sameness. Some of his publications include Excesses: Eros and Culture, Dangerous Emotions, and, most recently, Violence and Splendor.
